Do you know that motorcycle safety is the least explored area of traffic safety, globally, with the least expertise? Many countries have a problem! What is the solution? "... To be able to overcome challenges in the area of motorcycle traffic safety, four conditions need to be met: first, one needs to possess the support of knowledge and scientific community; second, moto projects and practical riding skills; third, institutional support and fourth connects previous three and is called PASSION FOR MOTORCYCLES.

Nothing makes it more efficient than having all four conditions in one place, whether it is about an individual or an state institution..."

Dissertation abstract: Main contribution of PhD thesis, are six new motorcycle safety indicators (MSI) for "measuring" levels of motorcycle safety (MS), which, until now, haven't been used in researches and projects. With that "MSI tools" we can identify the key problem in the field of MS, in some area (country or city), before the accident happens. These indicators will create a better understanding of the complexity of MS, point out the significance of monitoring and evaluating MS and will be an efficient tool for future researches and practical use. With the implementation of this method can make significant financial savings on local and national level.
